

Figure 2.5

High-level base graphics plotting functions for producing plots of a single variable. Where the function can be used to produce more than one type of plot, the relevant data type is shown (in gray). For example, `plot(numeric)` means that this is what the `plot()` produces when it is given a single numeric argument.